

Conclusion

These are the six sessions that will develop the believer to have a strong foundation in Christ. This is only the starting point. Discipleship is a lifelong process that does not end here. Remember that discipleship is not just a set of instructions for the person to follow but a life learned through imitation and teaching. If the teacher is not willing to demonstrate these six session lessons in his or her own life then the student will not follow.

After these sessions are complete there are a few follow up sessions that will help to maintain the discipleship relationship and continue the process of growth for the student.
